ALLEN BROOKS PAYS PENALTY FOR CRIME

traveled fast and not over five minutes was required for the trip from the court house to the arch. A man took one end of the rope, climbed a telephone pole, threw the rope over one of the steps on the pole and the body was pulled several feet in the air, where it hung until cut down by the police.

That finished the mob began crying for Burrell Oates, and then, Bubber Robertson. Both are negroes, and both are charged with murder of white men in Dallas. Oates has been tried and convicted several times, in each instance the sentence being reversed and the case sent back for a retrial.

The mob at this hour, noon, is gathered about the court house with several thousand angry, excited, gesticulating men in it. It is stated on the streets, however, that as soon as the mob had left with Brooks, the Sheriff and deputies immediately took the negroes out of the jail and in an automobile left for some point unknown. This report seems to be well founded, although it now looks as if the mob will demand a thorough search of the jail.

The leaders of the mob, it is said, were a white man and a negro. The white man is said to have been from Rockwall and the negro from Greenville. They were in the lead when the court room was reached and it was there that the white man was knocked down and cut by an officer trying to protect his prisoner.

Dallas is worked up as it never was before. There have been numerous instances of late of lawlessness among the blacks, with many shootings and a number of killings. These instances aroused the public to a high pitch and the assault of a negro upon a little two-year-old child last week was the finishing touch.

Immediately after the crime and the news of Brooks' arrest a mob formed to, it is believed, storm the jail, but the negro had been taken away—it was afterward learned, to Denton for safekeeping. He was taken away from Denton Sunday to Sherman and brought here only today, his trial under the indictment being set for today.

MOB WAS HEADED HERE.

That Caused Removal of Negro from Here to Sherman Saturday.

The negro Brooks was brought to the Denton county jail almost immediately after his arrest in Dallas. Sheriff Ledbetter fearing a mob of several hundred persons gathered in front of the jail and demanded the prisoner. They were permitted to search the jail, only to find that he had been taken elsewhere. The mob then believed to Fort Worth. Not until this week was it generally known that the negro had been here and only then a couple of days after he was taken to Sherman. A Record and Chronicle reporter got wise to the fact that the negro was here, but the Sheriff's office, wanting no lynching here, asked that it be withheld from publication.

Not until Thursday would Sheriff Orr talk freely of the negro's presence here. That was before he had been advised of the lynching.

"A man from Dallas came here quietly last Saturday morning," said Mr. Orr, "and spent a few hours satisfying himself that the negro was here. He returned to Dallas on the noon train. We got wind of the fact that fifty men at Dallas were coming up on the local that night and were to be joined at Carrollton by as many more. I immediately telephoned Sheriff Ledbetter of what I had heard and he requested me to take the negro to Sherman. I left on the noon train, the negro following me quietly and nobody who saw us suspected I had the negro for whom the mob was searching. I put him in the Grayson jail, going via Denton.

"The negro was almost scared to death of a mob. He looked upon the officers as his best friends and en route he asked me what he had better do and if it wouldn't be better for him to plead guilty. I refused to counsel him and said that the death penalty would probably follow a plea of guilty. But he said he did not want to be butchered by a mob. He was a touch-looking specimen and he admitted his guilt to me, saying that he had had several drinks of whisky on the day on which the crime was committed."

MOB IN FORT WORTH.

A telephone message received this afternoon by J. J. E. McCullar was that it was reported that the two negroes, Robertson and Oates, were being taken to Fort Worth and that a mob was forming in Fort Worth to go to Dallas in the hope of meeting the men.
