children also leaving school, the crowd shouted insults. The white children were not harmed and melted quickly into the crowd.

In Frankfort, Ky., Gov. A. B. Chandler issued a statement expressing regret that it was necessary "to use this means of guaranteeing equal rights to our citizens, but that we must do."

175 LEAVE SCHOOL

He added that "we in Kentucky always have prided ourselves on our ability to keep law and order. When the time comes that Kentucky can't do this, then it is time to turn in our charter. We intend to keep the troops at Sturgis as long as necessary."

About 175 of the 350 white children enrolled at the Sturgis school left their classes after the Negroes entered the school.

The situation remained quiet at Clinton, Tenn., where Gov. Frank Clement sent National Guardsmen last Saturday night to quell riots over court-ordered integration of Clinton High School.

CALM AT CLINTON

The 12 Negroes whose enrollment started the trouble attended classes without incident Thursday and 382 of the school's 788 white children were on hand. Only 312 white children showed up Wednesday.

Principal D. J. Brittain Jr. said some children are being kept out of school because of fear for their safety—fear that he said is being whipped up by a deliberate campaign.

A boycott at the Matoaka, W.Va., high school, where 28 Negroes have enrolled, continued with only 131 of the total enrollment of 602 reporting. A group of white adults, mostly women, again gathered outside the school to protest enrollment of Negroes.

Negroes enrolled at their own schools in Montgomery, Ala., Thursday after three Negroes and a National Guardsman were hanged in effigy Wednesday night at three Montgomery white schools. Asst. Supt. W. S. Garrett said no Negro students tried to enter white schools on the first day of the fall term.
